

THE DAILY PRINCETONIAN

Contents:

- Lussi brings winning tradition to Tigers
- Around the Ivies: Men's Soccer
- Sanner's lone goal pushes Princeton ahead
- You're doing fine
- On loving college \(or not\)
- Cartoon: Marks of a tiger
- The rush of rushing
- Nassau Hall reopens after reports of gunshot fire determined unfounded
- New research on grade deflation's impact concerns Eisgruber '83
- Klein tells audience "why Washington is horrible"

Lussi brings winning tradition to Tigers

By Victoria Majchrzak on Oct 09, 2013 01:32 am

Winning is in freshman forward Tyler Lussi's genes. Gustave Lussi, Tyler's great-great-grandfather, is considered to be one of figure skating's greatest trainers — he coached 16 world champions and seven Olympic gold medalists. In 2007, her younger brother Hunter, inspired by the Ironman races that their parents run, became the youngest person in the world [...]

Read in browser »

Around the Ivies: Men's Soccer

By Daily Princetonian Staff on Oct 09, 2013 01:32 am

The Ancient Eight kicked off their seasons last weekend, and though they had a late start, some of the Ivy League men's soccer teams have already made a big impact. Below, we try to make sense of the league so far: 1. Penn (4-6 overall, 1-0 Ivy League): The Quakers are certainly not unbeatable — they [...]

Read in browser »

Sanner's lone goal pushes Princeton ahead

By Stephen Wood on Oct 09, 2013 01:31 am

The Princeton soccer team hit the ground running, following up its season opener against Dartmouth on Saturday with Tuesday-night non-conference play against Drexel. The Tigers (4-5 overall, 1-0 Ivy League) had reason to be confident after their 2-1 win over Dartmouth, which was the Big Green's (4-1-4, 0-1) first loss of the season. Junior forward [...]

Read in browser »

You're doing fine

By Barbara Zhan on Oct 08, 2013 11:50 pm

When I was in elementary school, my class always had these timed multiplication tests — Mad Minutes. They consisted of 100 multiplication problems, and each person had exactly one minute to complete them. Every week, my class had a competition based on these Mad Minutes, and the winner would get a little prize, usually a [...]

Read in browser »

On loving college (or not)

By Shruthi Deivasigamani on Oct 08, 2013 11:50 pm

The summer after freshman year, I reconvened with my friends from home to rehash details of the first year out of what would supposedly be the greatest four in our lives. We aggressively agreed with each other: Yeah, man, college is the best. It's so great. I am having so much fun. And then one [...]

Read in browser »

Cartoon: Marks of a tiger

By Caresse Yan on Oct 08, 2013 11:50 pm

Read in browser »

The rush of rushing

By Benjamin Dinovelli on Oct 08, 2013 11:49 pm

Saturday morning, my Facebook feed appeared more like a physics problem set than English, as posts mostly consisted of a wide array of Greek letters. What some may have potentially mistaken for a Facebook language settings malfunction was actually the beginning of sorority pledging. In 2011, Princeton announced its decision to ban freshman affiliations with [...]

Read in browser »

Nassau Hall reopens after reports of gunshot fire determined unfounded

By Marcelo Rochabrun on Oct 08, 2013 11:21 pm

Reports of gunshots at Nassau Hall prompted the Princeton Police Department to close the building and search it for two-and-a-half hours Tuesday evening. The reports were ultimately determined to be unfounded, no injuries were reported, and the area was cleared at around 10:25 p.m. The University did not shut down campus during the incident. Events [...]

Read in browser »

New research on grade deflation's impact concerns Eisgruber '83

By Teddy Schleifer on Oct 08, 2013 11:10 pm

University President Christopher Eisgruber '83 said "lots of concerns" have been raised by a field study released this summer showing graduate schools do not consider an undergraduate program's grading policy when evaluating applicants. Eisgruber, who charged a University committee Monday with a wide review of the University's 10-year-old grade deflation policy, mentioned the study in an event that night with [...]

Read in browser »

Klein tells audience "why Washington is horrible"

By Loully Saney on Oct 08, 2013 10:37 pm

Award-winning Washington Post reporter Ezra Klein spoke on increasing polarization in Congress and ways to fix systemic problems within the government in a lecture titled "Why Washington is Horrible (In Charts)" Monday night. "Americans agree. Congress is horrible," he said. "Congressional polarization has never been as high as it is now." Klein called politics "a [...]"

Read in browser »

unsubscribe from this list | update subscription preferences