

OPINION

Trump supporters don't bite: Princeton progressives must burst the Orange Bubble

Julianna Lee

Contributing Opinion Writer

“At Princeton, there is a stereotype of the classic Trump voter: hateful, uneducated, racist, and transphobic. [Here], it’s easy to think that people don’t vote for Trump unless there is something really messed up about the way they see the world.”

Julianna Lee

“Across the board, economic issues, such as inflation and the rising cost of living, are impacting Americans in a far more significant way that Princeton students on campus are not impacted by. Friends and neighbors back home who voted red also largely cited kitchen-table issues, such as the soaring price of eggs and gas.”

Julianna Lee

“I voted for Donald Trump,’ and ‘I’m excited for the next four years,’ should not be a reason to dehumanize or overlook that person but perhaps an opportunity for communication and understanding.”

Julianna Lee

