Interclub Council holds inaugural info session, reveals efforts to reduce Bicker competition

Last year, a total of 1,193 students – about 80 percent of the Class of 2026 – participated in Street Week, the largest number of sophomore participants that the ICC had seen in the past decade. Throughout recent years, higher participation and limited spots have led to decreasing acceptance rates in most clubs, a trend that could continue when the Class of 2027 takes to the street.

“I think all the presidents have learned the lessons from last year’s Street Week. So we’re definitely focused on making sure that we replicate the successes and improve on the areas where we can improve.”

Caption: The Interclub Council (ICC) held its inaugural sophomore eating club panel on Friday, which was moderated by the Class of 2027 Council. All 11 eating club presidents, as well as representatives from the Brown Hall co-op, came together to inform sophomores about the various dining options available on campus ahead of Street Week, the week at the beginning of the spring semester when many sophomores will join an eating club.
